During the Pulse Candlelight Vigil At Dr. Phillips Performing Arts tonight, each victim's name was called out into the crowd, a deafening silence during each pause, painful sobs escaping on occasion, muffled in the distance. We had a moment of silence. I'm sure everyone noticed the birds fluttering overhead - after all, they were everywhere. I certainly noticed the birds. As everyone bowed their heads to pay their respects, I snapped a photo of the birds, thinking that there seemed to be an awful lot of them. There were 49 birds, my friends. The fallen were with us, tonight. #orlandostrong #prayfororlando #united #onepulse #pulseorlando #lgbt — with Kenzie Carolan and 4 others.

You are handling things very well in terms of tv, your presence, laying out the facts, setting a context for the briefings, all of it you are doing well. One thing to mention if you have interest. I know that Erin Burnett and her team from CNN are on the ground. I have always had good, fair and sane interviews with her. I know her producer, so if you have any interest in being on her show, I can send you her producer's name/number, and you can go from there. Just let me know. God Bless

Watching from afar feels weird with a crisis of this magnitude. From a national POV, you are doing amazing - lending a steady hand but not politicizing. Coverage and social media is spot on from your role. You are a strong leader and I'm proud of you and the team. While I wouldn't say 'these are the days we live for' I'm not sure what else to say.
